February Meeting a Work of Art

Don't miss the February gathering of the Black Hills Flyfishers. It's sure to be an excellent meeting. The soiree will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 13, at the Clyde Ice Cabin. The cabin is situated on the south side of Interstate 90 across from the Spearfish airport. The BHFF meets in the Northern Hills once a year to give our northern members a convenient opportunity to attend. But the program is good enough that no member should miss, no matter where they live.

Guy Tillett of Rapid City, a sportsman and photographer, will delight the gathered masses with an account of his trip to Alaska. Flylines has heard a report of this program from a member of the Black Hills Sportsmen group, who saw it during one of that club's meetings. The report was excellent. Tillett tells a great story, and shoots wonderful photographs. The presentation will be full of photos of fishing action and of the brilliant Alaskan wildlife and landscapes. Tillett is a great guy, to boot, and is a pleasure to talk with.

All that means you can't miss the meeting. We'll see you then.

BHFF Names New Board Members

The Black Hills Fly fishers named five new people to its board of directors during the December annual meeting. The new members are Jim Hawke, John Brewick, Mike Lees, Hans Stephenson, and Bonnie Edwards. Board members Bill Coburn, Jim LaFreniere, and Mark Vickers were reelected to the board, despite the best judgment of some of their fellow board members.

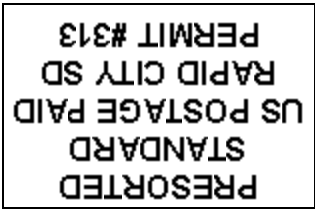

The following board members left their posts, and will be dearly missed: Harvey Crow, Bradee Beard, Jeff Burns, and Jim Phoenix. They all contributed in their own ways to helping make the Black Hills Flyfishers the best damn conservation organization committed to improving fisheries west of the Cheyenne River and east of the Wyoming border.

The Board also named a new slate of officers for the upcoming year. Paul Stabile will continue as President, Lim LaFreniere will serve as Vice President, Mark Vickers will continue as Secretary, and Ev Hoyt will remain as Treasurer.

Flylines is (mostly) confident that these fearless leaders will guide the club during what is sure to be an outstanding year.
